

Theodora Titonis

Vice President of Mobile Security

Theodora Titonis is an innovative entrepreneur whose passion for technology began when she started programming computers at the age of seven. While pursuing computer science at The Ohio State University she focused her efforts on the challenging field of security. During the dotcom-era, Theodora architected systems and provided security expertise to federal government intelligence and defense agencies, leading financial institutions and Fortune 500 Companies. Shortly after 9/11, Titonis was one of the first cybersecurity experts hired to work for the newly established Department of Homeland Security.

Theodora served as the Founder, CEO, sole investor, and a patent assignee of Marvin Mobile. Veracode, Inc., the leader in cloud-based application security testing, acquired Marvin in September 2012. Ms. Titonis now serves as Veracode's Vice President of Mobile Security